INTRODUCTION

In December of 1913, at the Sixth General Convention, hosted by Beta Chapter, one achievement was the creation of a fraternity journal. The idea seems to have been born at Gamma Chapter many years prior to 1913. General President Charles Herbert Garvin formally recommended it at the Fifth General Convention in 1912; however, no action was taken on it. One of General President Garvin's first acts at the Sixth General Convention was to appoint a Committee on the Journal. The Committee not only recommended the establishment of a journal but that it should be titled the Sphinx – that it should be published monthly from October to May of each year. It was later decided that the journal would be a quarterly publication. The brother who was to serve as the Fraternity's Vice-President was also to serve as Editor-in-Chief with the Printing Committee Chair also serving as the journal's Business Manager. Fifty cents was recommended as the subscription and was to be added to the Grand Tax. The first Editor-in-Chief was Brother Raymond Winfred Cannon, and the first issue appeared in March 1914. Aside from the N.A.A.C.P.'s The Crisis magazine, The Sphinx would go on to become the longest, continually in-print African American magazine.

Strikingly, among the journals of the National Pan-Hellenic Council organizations, only Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority's The Ivy Leaf magazine has had any scholarly analysis conducted on it.¹ The Ivy Leaf is also the only one of these journals that has been archived in a way that makes it accessible to researchers.² This project is intended to do two things: (1) provide basic biographical information about the Editors-in-Chief of The Sphinx from 1914-2014; and (2) chronicle the contents of The Sphinx from 1914-2014. My hope is that individuals interested in Alpha's history and legacy will find it a useful tool in their study and research. Thank you to my countless research assistants who made this work possible.
